NANCY MATHER, PHD, is a Professor at the University of Arizona in the Department of Disability and Psychoeducational Studies. She is a coauthor of the Woodcock-Johnson® IV. LYNNE E. JAFFE, PHD, is in private practice specializing in psychoeducational evaluations, educational therapy, and consulting regarding interventions for students with learning problems.

The book itself is full of helpful information for understanding the WJ-IV and intervention planning but the description is VERY misleading. There is NO CD included, you get a card with a website and an access code to the resources. The problem is when you get to the website, there is no way to input the access code. I called Wiley.com and no one had a clue why that is so. I had to leave my name and number, and I was told they would contact me when they figure out how those who purchased the book can access the resources. Great book but thought it was VERY unprofessional to release a book with a vital component totally unfinished.

Extremely useful book, but the CD is not included. The access code on an included card would be enough, but the website doesn't appear ready to accept the codes yet. I am hopeful that Wiley will fix this soon!

As a school psychologist found it helpful. I was also grateful that the recommendations could be printed out. I was able to share them with my resource teachers.

Great

Very helpful.

Great examples of diagnostic reports and accommodations for children identified as having a specific learning disability.

This book was very informative and worth every penny! A wonderful resource!

Great book and excellent recommendations to include in reports.
