Future Cities: All That Matters

Synopsis

In Future Cities: All that Matters Camilla Ween outlines the challenges of meeting the anticipated growth of world cities over the next few decades. Never in the history of civilization has the need to deliver so much been so urgent - and with dwindling world resources. Despite the difficulties, the book charts how some cities are already tackling the problems, policies that are emerging to meet these challenges and highlights innovations that are currently being explored.

Customer Reviews

Camilla Ween is an architect, urban planner and Harvard University Loeb Fellow. She worked for Transport for London for 11 years, where she was responsible for advising the Mayor of London on the implications for transport of land use policy and development, and developing planning policy for many of London's key growth areas.

This is one of the most fascinating and sobering books I have read in the last decade. It is not just for people in the transportation and urban planning sectors, but for all thinking citizens worldwide. The distinguished author charts, in understandable and engaging prose, the growth of the world's major population centers and possible solutions to the effect of this growth on the earth's climate and resources. This book should be an essential part of the curriculum in every secondary school and university.
